November 18, 2013 – New York City, USA

The Epson International Pano Awards has announced the winners of the 2013 panoramic photography competition. Photographer Andrew Prokos of New York City, USA was awarded two silver and three bronze awards for his panoramic fine art photography of New York City, Toronto, and Bryce Canyon, Utah. The five winning images are:

“Fourth of July Panorama, New York City” – Silver Award, Built Environment

“Tribute in Light” – Silver Award, Built Environment

“Panoramic Cityscape of Toronto at Dusk” – Bronze Award, Built Environment

“Japanese Bridge, Brooklyn Botanic Garden” – Bronze Award, Nature

“Bryce Canyon Morning” – Bronze Award, Nature

This year’s competition saw 4,068 entries from 843 photographers in 57 countries.

“The quality of the entries sets a higher benchmark each year, with 2013 providing compelling panoramic images from extremely talented photographers”, says Craig Heckenberg, Business Unit Manager at Epson Australia.

The judging panel this year included some of the world's top panoramic photographers and industry professionals, including members of the major panoramic photography trade organizations, the IAPP and IVRPA. “I was thrilled to have five photos make it to the final rounds and win medals, considering how intense the competition was this year”, says Photographer Andrew Prokos.
